

Asiya Wadud: ECHO EXHIBIT

LOWER
MANHATTAN
CULTURAL
COUNCIL

Poems form in the space we make for them. Sometimes a few words rattle around our minds, with only the faintest context to give them shape. Sometimes there is a fleeting image we want to imprint — we want it to stay with us a little longer. If we sit with the image, we can watch it come into focus — we can take hold of the words, we write them down and watch the poem take its shape.

Scattered throughout the Seaport District and Pier 17, you will find selected poems inspired by fifteen minute telephone conversations held between writers and members of the general public and designed by Shannon Finnegan. These poems are the lasting evidence of a conversation between two strangers during quarantine, capturing the ideas, textures and sensations of that particular interaction. We invite you to celebrate and reflect on these mutual experiences, both personally and as a community.

	ADDRESS	POEM TITLE	POEM AUTHOR
1	16 Fulton St	By foot or conveyance	Naima Rauam & Asiya Wadud
2	Pier 17 - 89 South St	The News I can dance now COLLECTIONS Near Pier 35 Aerial view	Chloë Bass & Alisha Mascarenhas Vivian Young & Sevinç Çalhanoğlu Jasmin Tabatabaee & Alisha Mascarenhas Trevor Holland & Asiya Wadud Tobi Elkin & Lara Atallah
3	203 Front St	Centrifugal The New Scene	Sarah Elbatanouny & Lara Atallah Yasmeen Mughal & Rebekah Smith
4	193 Front St	untitled How much do we trust on the phone	Lticia Herbert & Madison McCartha David Thomson & Chia-Lun Chang
5	190 Front St	Slalom	Faiza Haq & Lara Atallah
6	4 Fulton St	Atlas to every borough	Kamau Ware & Asiya Wadud
7	Front St between Fulton and Beekman	WEATHER DETECTION That's Not the Name of the Realtor What's at the end Mère untitled It's personal It's comfort It's dear	Ruthie Robertson & Alisha Mascarenhas Megan Mandrachio & Rebekah Smith Efe Murad & Sevinç Çalhanoğlu Muriel Louveau & Chia-Lun Chang Bryce Anthony & Madison McCartha Jingjing Tian & Asiya Wadud
8	10 Fulton St	The Remains Viaje Perdido	Gigi Li & Chia-Lun Chang Jean Carla Rodea & Rebekah Smith

ECHO EXHIBIT is co-presented by Lower Manhattan Cultural Council (LMCC) with the Seaport District and The Howard Hughes Corporation as part of River To River 2020: Four Voices.

SEAPORT
DISTRICT NYC

Howard Hughes

LMCC.net